Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Monday 08 Feb 2021

UK Outlook for Saturday 13 Feb 2021 to Monday 22 Feb 2021:
It will remain cold or very cold with brisk winds during the start of this period but potentially turning milder over southwestern then western areas for a time, but with a risk of gales at times here. Outbreaks of rain and snow, potentially heavy for some southwestern areas are possible across western and southern areas, whilst mostly dry and bright in the east and north. However with a continued risk of snow showers possible in central and northern areas. Further into this period, snow and attendant wintry hazards are likely to continue which could affect mainly northern areas and eastern areas but not confined to. Overall, conditions look to remain cold but some milder interludes are possible with accompanied unsettled conditions moving in from the west or the southwest.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.